Choices Pathway

Average Points Score (APS) – A Simple Guide

At NDSB6 we use a student’s prior performance in examinations to guide progress to the next level and to predict future potential. Although we accept that each student is an individual and that all students develop at different rates, we have found this guide beneficial in making sure that students are on the right course and combination of subjects.

Average Points Score (APS) is a calculation made by using grades achieved at GCSE level. Each grade is given a points score and we calculate the APS over your best 8 results. We find it by adding all of the points together and dividing by 8.

Average Point Score: You will have received progress reviews on which your teachers will have indicated your predicted grades and you have also received some actual GCSE grades. You should use both of these to calculate your APS and use this to guide your choices.
